WHAT THE CURRAN COMMISSION DID TODAY

At this morning's session of the Curran committee Josephine Jenkins told that the Little Wanderer Magazine receipts for 1913 were $17,530.33, of which $15,000 were sales of the magazine.

Albert Detloff refused to testify. He is the man charged with selling a boy.

Wm. E. Mooney, attorney for the Curran committee, recommended that the Guardian Angels Day Nursery, 4525 Ashland, be closed because it was so dirty.

Investigators report that the White Hall orphanage has seven solicitors, who are given 50 per cent and expenses for soliciting. From Jan. 1 to April 15 this year they collected $1,409.94, of which $238.80 was donated direct, and $1,171.14 was collected. Of this the collectors got $588.07 commission and $409.29 for expenses, leaving $178.88 for the society.

Investigators recommend that it be closed because the graft for collectors was too great.

SUBURBS KICK ON THE GAS BEING SERVED THEM

Highland Park and Waukegan turned out in a body to lodge complaint against the North Shore Gas Company with the Utilities Commission.

Indignant housewives claimed that the gas furnished was unfit for use, causing considerable sickness, destroying flowers and plants and frightening servants from the district.

Many tales of belated dinners, impaired singer's voices and husbands forced to do the cooking because other members of the family were ill were told.

The representatives of the company denied the charges, blaming the trouble on defective gas fixtures.
